12:56.7.13.24

Elephants No More, youtube edition

My fellow Americans, good evening. As returning viewers already know, my name is Ulysses H. Stearn and I am the founding director, Special Operations Executive and Top Banana for America's newest and most forward thinking intelligence agency, the Directorate of Unified Intelligence.

This particular video is part of our ongoing series about the largest and most imminent non-conventional strategic threats to America at this time. In most cases, these sorts of threats are threats precisely because they are not widely recognized for being critical strategic threats by more conventional observers. Or worse, these non-conventional threats are being actively ignored by the same because they stand to materially benefit from them in some way.

In our last video, which we strongly recommend watching before this one, we made a strong and self-evident case that excessive pride of circumstantial identity is the political form of syphilis, with all of the implications that entails. We made a strong slash unassailable case using the modern American Republican party as the best possible textbook example of this unfortunate and frequently terminal condition.

Indeed, the Modern Republican party is such a good example of this grave and progressively deteriorating social disease that we are certain that future historians, sociologists and political science majors will refer to the current American Republican party (and their direct historical precursors who spoke better German than English) not as a mere example of the tertiary stage of political Syphilis but the best possible real world representation of the Platonic ideal of late stage political Syphilis.

While political Syphilis is never pretty in any demographically defined group it shows up in, when one of our only two viable political parties succumbs to this terminal condition it puts all of us at risk. Including and especially the Republican party's most statistically likely voters, as they have been finding out in earnest recently.

Countering this imminent and terminal threat aimed squarely at the heart of American experiment will take more than just another "most important in history" national election cycle.

This does not mitigate the importance of voting, but voting only keeps the wolf at the door for another 4 years at best, and the whole time the losing party will keep playing out their loser aggrievement script to entrench their base. Who, despite their shrinking numbers do happen to own a grossly disportioncate amount of legally purchased small arms in this country. They are our fellow Americans after all and do merit a modicum of respect and understanding for why they keep voting they way they do.

If voting is not quite enough to neutralize this threat, than what is the average American (whoever the heck that is) to do? Well, sad to say, the one thing you can not do right now in good conscience is turn to the other party for help, because it's their idiot messaging and one plank political platform that has made the Republican party so attractive to so many in the first place.

Even worse, you can't out-argue Political Syphilis super spreaders in the media because they and their proponents and supporters only care about the facts that support their positions. When the facts don't support their idiot ideas, then they will go with their feelings or just invent new "facts" to support their platform.

But worse than that, with the modern Republican party being overwhelmingly supported by the vast majority of our American oligarchs, not to mention many Russian oligarchs and their public-private intelligence services scheisen posting on their behalf, a well meaning individual can not hope to out-message or out-spend the Republican party, no matter how many sassy tweets you put out on your blinged out social media pages.

So what's a well meaning American to do to counter such a well entrenched and well funded imminent political threat to our Great Experiment?

Well, the funny thing about our very own political Death Star is that it has the same fundamental weakness that all political entities share. As we all know, as often as not in politics, symbols tend to be *more important than the realities they represent.

Once a major political party gets a friendly and reassuring symbol successfully implanted in the American psyche, any number of striking factual inconsistencies and severe departures from their most recent electoral platform can easily be swept under their symbolic rug.

And again, there is no better example of this than American Republican Party. For over 10 score years, the Republican Party has been hiding their unfortunate acts, reprehensible policies and true nature behind the benevolent facade of our friend, the Elephant.

Originally depicted in a critical and unflattering political cartoon in the 1800's to characterize the Republican Party's continuing affinity for starting WARS and other adversarial foreign adventures based on the slimmest of pretexts, the Republican party adroitly flipped the script on that unflattering symbol and turned it into a party asset.

Even despite it's grossly ironic foreign origins, there are few better symbols for the sort of small "c" practical conservatism that the American Republican Party was first founded on.

Elephants have been doing the same things the same way and walking the same migration routes for longer than people have been paying attention to such things. A better representation of continuity, overwhelming size and strength and strongly implied permanence does not exist in the animal kingdom. Well, not above sea level at least.

Moreover, even with it's obvious size and strength and prehensile schnoz, the true defining characteristic of the Elephant is, or course, it's legendary memory. Elephants remember everything, good and bad. And as a result of that, they tend to be conservative in their thinking because they remember what works and what doesn't.

Because of these natural (and largely factual) associations with Elephants, for at least a good hundred years longer than it's actually been true, the Republicans have been able to successfully cast themselves as "the adults in the room" when it comes to deciding America's foreign and economic policies.

Yet the characterization of the REPUBLICANS being the "adult" in the room was already wildly ironic 60 years ago, such an assertion now is an utter absurdity when it comes to our modern day Republican Party. The only way you can describe the Republican party as an "adult" of any kind is an adult that happens to be suffering from a highly advanced case of tertiary syphilis and all of it's associated compounding neurological difficulties. Well THAT, plus likely chronic alcoholism, fetal alcohol syndrome and a historically bad case of ye olde military industrial complex.

Given their acute and escalating break with reality and their own historical policies, the modern Republican party has precisely zero historical continuity with itself, much less America at large.

Their own actions have gravely decreased their relative size and weakened their strength. But, worst of all, in their current tertiary state of Syphilis induced insanity, the Republican party remembers very little of either it's own history or America's, and what little they will admit to they are actively trying to cover up or rewrite before our very eyes.

Because of these evident if not conspicuous developments, associating such a criminally insane political party with the Elephant is an insult to Elephants everywhere. Yes, even those poor, unfortunate elephants suffering from the exact same unholy trifecta of fetal alcohol syndrome, chronic and acute alcoholism and tertiary stage Syphilis.

Having such a noble and worthy animal represent what was once the better of America's two historically viable political parties is no longer simply inaccurate, it is now utterly implausible as a symbol, and therefore untenable as a viable symbol of anything the modern Republican party actually is in word and deed in 2026.

As mentioned previously, if anything, the modern Republican Party increasingly resembles not so much an Elephant but more the Elephant Man, but minus any attempts at corrective surgery.

It is because of these self evident reasons that the symbol of the Elephant for the GOP is now a dead symbol.

Please let us take a moment of silence to mourn the untimely passing of the GOP's main symbol for the last 150 years.

Which brings us to the question, where do we go from here?

Well, as much as we were sincerely hoping to replace a long outdated Animal Totem with another Animal Totem of better accuracy, there is simply NO other species in the Animal Kingdom that is EVEN CLOSE to approximating the STAGGERING level of cognitive dissonance and dramatic mental decline necessary for creating, maintaining and reinforcing so many different and mutually exclusive (and/or agitating) levels of DOUBLETHINK, DOUBLETALK, and not a bit of THE OLD RELIABLE; good, old fashioned PROVABLE ELEPHANT EXCREMENT.

As smart as they are, not even ELEPHANTS can aspire to such towering feats of BICAMERAL BRILLIANCE.

So if not an animal, what then? What symbol best expresses the true nature of modern Republican party? Well, the short version is that if a party or person consistently talks like they are bananas, acts like they are bananas, and is working off a largely unspoken agenda that itself is bananas, as far as we are concerned a rose is a rose by any other name, even when it is a banana.

Banana by name and banana by nature, only the banana can presently best symbolize the true nature and goals of the modern day Republican Party.

Yes, you heard me right, the banana. This is not mere name calling or just a goof, or even the more likely prospect of one banana calling another banana yellow. The symbol of the Banana isn't just the best possible characterization of the current GOP, it's the ONLY accurate and widely recognizable symbol of the party now.

The conspicuous congruities between the GOP and a banana go well below the surface, although there is that too. The chromatic proximity between the pigment of a peeled banana is conspicuously close to that of a statistically likely Trump voter in their ongoing winter of discontent.

Since we already touched on HOW the banana best symbolizes the behavior and actions of the modern day GOP, we can move on to their deeper congruities. Like for instance, the banana also best represents the actual political goals of the inner Republican party, which they will never just come out and say in so many words.

The short version of the banana republicans plan for America is this: (extends left hand) This is America. (Shows banana in right hand), this is the Republican party. There plan for America is this (simulates hand coitus with banana). Period full stop.

The banana is the best symbol of the actual working goal of the modern GOP in that when one takes in the entire scope of their totally counter-intuitive policies that so often run against the grain of even the most basic of common sense. The only strategic goal that makes any kind of sense of their dumpster fire of a legislative and wider social agenda is nothing more or less than they seem dead set to turn America into a Banana Republic, and they are just the Banana Republicans to do it. Yes, they surely are.

This is not just mere word play, this is the modern gospel of revealed truth that's been looking you straight in the eye ever since America was catapulted through the Looking Glass on the election night of 2016, no matter how much you want to believe otherwise.

If you are not familiar with the term "banana republic", this a verbatim summary quote from the Wikipedia article that you can and should read for yourself:

"…a banana republic is a country with an economy of state capitalism, whereby the country is operated by private commercial enterprise for the exclusive profit of the ruling class. Such exploitation is enabled by collusion between state and favored economic monopolies, in which the PROFIT, derived from the exploitation of public land ("or resources") is private property, while the debts incurred thereby are the financial responsibility of the public treasury (IE the taxpayers, like you and me). *Such an imbalanced economy remains limited by the uneven development of town and country, and usually reduces the national currency in devalued bank notes (which then results in INFLATION)…"

GEE, that doesn't sound familiar AT ALL. How ODD that the one party that wants to PRIVATIZE EVERYTHING like our mail, our health, our correctional facilities, our public resources, our public lands, our public EVERYTHING is just one word shy in their actual name of being the BANANA republicans they most certainly are.

BANANA by name, BANANA by nature. BANANA in thought, and BANANA in deed. BANANA by day, and BANANA by night. BANANA in the morning, and BANANA after midnight, when they are all going to let it hang out. BANANA in their goals, and beyond BANANAS in actions.

But what is by far the most striking and acutely alarming similarity between the modern Republican party and the modern BANANA is the increasingly evident fact that both are presently on the verge of imminent extinction, and facing such acute peril for the exact same reasons.

The GOP, like the SIMILARLY endangered Cavendish Banana, is ALSO a monocultural species which ALSO propagates through a remarkably SIMILAR method of vegetative multiplication (i.e. CLONING) that results in widespread Genetic and/or political HOMOgenization.

As is clearly demonstrated by the rather MONOCULTURAL uniformity in the GOP Leadership in being a bunch of excessively opinionated (and/or insecure) white guys with more money than sense, the GOP also suffers from the same conspicuous lack of genetic diversity that makes it particularly susceptible to opportunistic infections of all sorts, and especially the political equivalent of SYPHILIS.

Another advantage that the Banana offers as not just A, but the ONLY accurate symbol of the modern Republican party is that it best characterizes the nature and unstated goals of the ruling trinity of Top Bananas of the Reich-wing Echo Chamber.

The Infernal Trinity of which I speak is, of course, is Steve BANANA (Bannon) of the Bright-Fart All Men's Chorus, that prince of putzery, whoops, excuse me punditry, Sean BANANA TEA (Hannity) of FAUX, whoops, no wait GUY FAWKES, dammit, FOX news, and of course, that godfather of modern American "conservatism" Rush "CAVENDISH" Limbaugh. These three individuals have duped the most credulous and gullible of our fellow American citizens into blaming all the problems in their lives that have been caused by native born white men with too much money on powerless immigrants and other marginalized communities who want to TAKE AWAY all the jobs that none of THEM to do in the first place.

There is no denying the superlative advantages the modern rodent fornicating Republican party has in terms of funding, messaging, political gamesmenship and political and economic power. Even though the modern Republican party only superficially reflects the values of AT BEST maybe 30% of all Americans, our best guess is they also directly represent the interests of those who control a MINIMUM of 85% of America's GDP.

Yet for all it's overwhelming strength, the nature of the strength of the Republican party is exceedingly brittle. There are two things authoritarians, autocrats and corporate/religious fascists can not survive over time. The first is being laughed at in public. The second is being widely associated in the minds of their citizens/victims with a freaking BANANA.

If you want to do your part in mitigating the imminent and overwhelming threat that the 2026 American Republican Party poses to it's own country, in your mind you need to start retroactively inserting the word BANANA whenever you hear the word

"Republican" or "Republicans". ESPECIALLY when watching or listening to any news or social media postings.

If you UNWISELY decide to talk politics in mixed company, every time you say the word "Republican" say the word BANANA before it. And especially on your social media pages. HASHTAG BANANA REPUBLICANS, HASHTAG BANANA hint hint.

If you hear other people talking about politics in public, once you become reasonably confident that they aren't packing heat or likely to attack you in public, when you hear anybody say the word "Republican" FORCEFULLY INTERRUPT the speaker by saying "Oh, I am sorry, but don't you mean BANANA REPUBLICAN?". If/when the speaker tries to shut you down or dismiss your accurate characterization, simply follow up with the magic words banana by name, banana by nature.

Further discourse with an actual Republican supporter is generally not advisable at this point, but if you UNWISELY choose to continue your conversation, let them sputter and bluster long enough to make your case for you, then follow up with, YEP, banana in word and banana in deed. If they get real stroppy then call them a RINO who isn't fit to lick the spats of a REAL Republican. OR you could go with the frequently reliable, but not always true, "Well, you're just mad because your political sensibilities are just a badly abstracted reaction to all those confusing and alarming homoerotic impulses you have suffered since you were a teenager." But I probably WOULD NOT as those qualify as fighting words and especially if they are accurate.

DO NOT, under any circumstances, presume to THROW or otherwise FORCIBLY THREATEN another person, political candidate or Republican party apparatchik with A BANANA.

DO NOT bring a BUNCH of BANANAS to any REDCAP NUREMBERG rallies to THROW at any speakers. Though we do have an affinity for irony in our works, this is not one of those times. IF you throw ONE or more BANANAS at a Republican candidate in public, at minimum you can expect to get arrested and charged with FELONY ASSAULT. At worst, your ass is going to get LIT UP by any number of twitchy security sub-contractors or Secret Service agents, or possibly just BEAT DOWN by a horde of REDCAP MMA wannabes.

IF you want to go down the political activism road, we suggest something a bit more symbolic, like displaying a YUGE banana banner in the probable camera view area of a public event, or possibly even a GIANT INFLATABLE BANANA.

For almost 200 years the Republican party has survived any number of challenges, electoral reversals, economic crises that they themselves started, public scandals, impeachments, sexual harassment complaints, campaign funding shenanigans, other rat fornicating kinds of dirty tricks becoming public, not only to survive but succeed beyond all expectation or reason in their current and grossly disproportionate political control and influence over our Great American Experiment. Many of which would have killed a lesser political party, and it's continuing survival is a living testament to it's inherent strength. But there are two things the Modern American Republican Party can not and will not survive under any circumstances.

The first is actually succeeding in their BANANAS PROJECT 2025 plans.

The second is the Republicans having their most publicly known and identifiable mascot (IE the Elephant) be irreveocably and undeniably replaced in the hearts and minds of their fellow Americans with a HUMAN SIZED BANANA DRESSED UP LIKE MR. PEANUT. And HELL YES, with TOP HAT and MONOCLE.

In the interest of post-partisanship we will, OF COURSE, concuss the many and miserable failings of that party of sheep in sheep's clothing, the American Democratic Party. But it will be awhile as the Democrats don't presently pose too much of a threat to anyone, except themselves.

And ultimately at this point, there ain't two ways about it. I don't care what your race is, your religion, what your artificially inflamed feelings are about immigrants and homosexuals, if you make less than a 100 grand a year and vote for ANY republican for federal, state or local office, what you are is a chicken voting for Colonel Sanders. If you make more than a 100 grand a year and still vote Republican for any elected, well all you are is an upwardly mobile chicken who votes for Colonel Sanders.

This concludes device 1B "Elephants No More". Thank you for your time and attention. If you want to support more critical works by our organization, please visit dui-us.com at your earliest convenience and contribute 1% (or more, as you see fit) of any and all bank accounts, trust fund annuities, stock and/or crypto portfolios, property holdings, lottery winnings, Roth IRA's or other funds or accounts you can legally withdraw funds from, excepting any retirement funds or educational accounts.

Keep an eye for our next youtube device coming soon. Good fortune to all of you and God bless America. Upwards and Onwards. UHS OUT